'Taking Evidence Further'...

WORKSHOP OVERVIEW

In conjunction with 17th NIH Scientific Seminar and NIH Research Week (17-20th Nov. 2014), Institute for Health Systems Research (IHSR) is organising a workshop on “Research Highlight” on the 19th and 20th November 2014 (two sessions).

The workshop will cover on the Introduction to the Research Highlight (RH); Components of a Research Highlight as well as Technique on how to write them.

The workshop will cover both theory and skills training. Participants are highly encouraged to bring their: (1) own laptop; (2) own report or data for practice and to use it as part of actual development/writing of a research Highlight, it would be extremely beneficial.

The number of participants is limited to max. 30, so that individualised attention could be given and tailored to individual interests and needs.

WORKSHOP OBJECTIVES

- At the end of this session, participants would be acquainted with Research Highlight (RH); and
- To be able to understand transition from report to RH; and
- To learn how to develop RH

WORKSHOP OUTPUT

- To be able to develop appropriate and effective title and key messages for a Research Highlight
- Identify topic and to produce (at least) a draft of a Research Highlight on priority / areas of interest among workshop participants
